(U) Innovative Additions to the CIA Career Website Include Jennifer Garner Recruitment Video

A new addition to the CIA Careers page has been released on the public Internet site. Jennifer Garner, Emmy Award winning actress and star of ABC's television series "Alias", speaks about careers at the CIA in a Flash video. Garner, now in her third season as the "Alias" character Sydney Bristow, accepted the chance to film the recruitment video after being approached by OPA Film Industry Liaison

[redacted] Garner was very excited to be associated with this project, telling Diane Sawyer on ABC's "Good Morning America" that she feels it is her patriotic duty to participate by helping the organization she greatly respects. Her statement focuses on the CIA's need to hire people with "wide-ranging talents and diverse backgrounds" to carry out its mission to "safeguard America and its people."

The Recruitment Center has added four new Flash movies enhancing information available on the Clandestine Service, Scientists, Engineers and Technology, Analytical and Professional Positions to the CIA Career website. These additions come at a time when the Recruitment Center is actively campaigning to reach a broader audience and remain user-friendly. The CIA Internet homepage receives about 5.2 million visits/month.

You can access the new flash videos by clicking on www.cia.gov/employment on the Internet.
